

Richard Morrison
Vice President, Government Affairs

Richard Morrison is the vice president of government affairs for Adventist Health System and the regional vice president of the Florida Division for government and regulatory affairs. He is responsible for developing and coordinating public and regulatory policy at the local, state and federal level.

Morrison has over 30 years of health care experience in a wide variety of areas including strategic planning, marketing, mergers and acquisitions, managed care, compliance as well as government and regulation. He has been appointed to various state wide advisory committees by the Governor of Florida, chairs the Family Practice Teaching Hospital Council and currently chairs numerous boards in the local community ranging from early learning to emergency medicine. He has also testified before Congress and the Florida Legislature on various health care issues.

Morrison graduated from Florida State University, Phi Beta Kappa, and did his graduate work in clinical psychology.