

Philip A. Smith, M.D.

Vice President, Information Services
Chief Medical Information Officer

---

Philip Smith, M.D., is vice president and chief medical information officer for Adventist Health System and AHS Information Services. He is responsible for medical leadership and physician adoption of clinical information systems (CIS). Smith has worked with CIS since 1992 when he automated his medical practice. Prior to joining AHS in 2003, he served as a physician consultant with Cerner Corporation planning and implementing large scale clinical information systems and computerized physician/provider order entry (CPOE).

Smith received his undergraduate degree from Case Western Reserve University. He received his medical and masters degrees from Wright State University, is a Fellow of the American Academy of Family Physicians, and board certified in Family Medicine.